FROM THE CENTER SEAT

After a much long delay, each member of the USS DaVinci will soon be the proud owner of a membership card. Connie has been working on a nice design and after I sign all the cards she will have them laminated! The cards will come in handy when we meet at CiCi's pizza for the July Night Out. The last time I went in there with the family the manager gave us our free drinks but wanted to see something to prove we were DaVinci members. Although I did not have a membership card he did accept my DaVinci business card as proof. The cards should be ready by the 4th of July cookout.

I am scheduling a clean up of our Adopt-A-Highway for 17 July beginning at 8:00 AM. It is early but it is also best to beat the heat. It has been quite a while since we last picked up trash and we need to start again or we may lose it. We will meet at the corner of Blackmon road and the access to East 80 (J. R. Allen Parkway). If we finish early enough we can go out for breakfast! It should not take more than 1 to 1-1/2 hours depending on the number of folks that show up.

Check out this article from Trek Today:

Amongst the items delivered by the Discovery space shuttle to the International Space Station earlier today, was a patch with a Star Trek connection. The acronym for the NASA patch for the Window Observational Research Facility, a science equipment rack that will enable astronaut-attended and remote-controlled Earth-observation experiments, is the same as the name of LTCMDR Worf, the Klingon seen on Star Trek: The Next Generation and Star Trek: Deep Space Nine. When the patch's creator, Tony Boatright, realized this, he decided to use Worf's Klingon language on the patch, after first checking with Rick Berman's office to make sure that he “wouldn’t violate any Star Trek canon.”

Here is the WORF patch!

Getting the go-ahead, the next task was to decide what to write in Klingon. “We agreed on the Klingon Klinshai, or Mandel, script that had appeared in The U.S.S. Enterprise Officer’s Manual to spell out the name W-O-R-F,” said Boatright. Some of the WORF patches are currently in the STS-131 Official Flight Kit, which is a stash of souvenirs that will be distributed to team members and other organizations after Discovery’s return to Earth. EXECUTIVELY SPEAKING

I thought I might take some time this issue to discuss a little comparison between trekdom and the real-world. Enjoy!

From Computerworld: With the latest theatrical release of Star Trek, the starship Enterprise launches on its mission to seek out new life and new civilizations. Gene Roddenberry's vision for the future was founded on hope for humanity -- but what powers his crew's ongoing trek across the stars is incredibly advanced technology.

In 2010, we're still a long way off from warp-drive engines, having not yet solved simple problems such as avoiding space debris or sending astronauts to nearby Mars. Yet despite this slow progress, the silver screen is consistently portraying less fiction and more prediction.

Starting with Georges Méliès' Le Voyage dans la Lune (A Trip to the Moon) in 1902, science-fiction films have a tradition of taking contemporary science and extending it to logical conclusions. Modern developments are bringing us closer to that predicted future, but there is still a gulf between reality and Hollywood's artistic license.

We've looked at some of our favorite science fiction films to see how they reflect the reality of our times. Here are six kinds of technologies that sci-fi movies have long relied on, and how we're approaching or diverging from those fictional applications.

Artificial Intelligence (AI)

At the movies: The war against the machine resumed as John Connor leads a band of humans in the post-Judgment Day fight to save the future in Terminator Salvation. Their opponent is a sentient machine that, after being given control of the U.S.'s nuclear arsenal, decided that Earth would be better off without humanity.

Terminator's Skynet (1984-2009) has not been the only movie machine to make such decisions; The Matrix (1999-2003) and Colossus (1970) came to similar conclusions. But sometimes annihilation is not so much a result of megalomania as of faulty programming, as with WarGames' Joshua (1983) and 2001's HAL (1968).

Of course, artificial intelligence is rarely malevolent by design. In 2008's Iron Man, multimillionaire protagonist Tony Stark was aided by an unseen servant named Jarvis, a self-aware program that first resided literally within the walls of Stark's mansion and was later uploaded to Stark's titular armored suit. Jarvis exhibited an undeniable personality just by his choice of words and tone of voice.

In reality, AI has thus far amounted to the preprogramming of computers to respond to (and occasionally learn from) increasingly diverse and complex sets of actions and conditions. We may never create a technological equivalent of sentience, or self-awareness.

Given the reality of Moore's Law and the seemingly limitless growth potential of computing, some people consider true AI to be inevitable. "In the coming decades, humanity will likely create a powerful artificial intelligence," predicts The Singularity Institute for Artificial Intelligence. The institute's mission is "to confront this urgent challenge, both the opportunity and the risk." The risk arises when two intelligent species refuse to coexist, which in sci-fi movies means a cybernetic revolt. Of course, conflict makes for better narrative, which is why there have been few films about peaceful relations between organic and mechanical beings. Given humanity's seeming inability to restrain its own innovation, we can only hope that the fiction in sci-fi is found not in the eventual development of AI, but in how our future creations view their creators.

More on these technologies in next month's Pilot!

GREETINGS FROM TAMPA

Hello everyone! I am sure that everybody did a sigh of relief now that I am not there causing havoc! LOL! Hum, where to begin to tell about my current adventures away from Fort Benning, GA to Tampa, FL. Since my arrival in Tampa in May 2010 I have had many new experiences. From taking time to enjoy the sites in town to the adventures in the new unit I have been assigned to. Although, this place is cool, there is no place like home.

About 2:00 PM on 09 May I left for Tampa. The drive was about 6 hours; it was cool that there was no traffic until I hit Lake City. Rain was coming down, but it was still manageable for me to push on. I arrived in my new apartment about 10:00 PM. The Agency that I was going through for housing had a special lock for me to open and get in. I was glad because I was beat. The next day, I arrived to McDill Air Force Base. The line was a bit long, however, it was a lot faster than Fort Benning's main gate. I finally arrived at US Central Command's area. It was totally magnificent. There was a guard at the front of the road to the area. However, there were palm trees, beautiful buildings and a short path leading toward the entrance of the building that I would be working in. That was a real sight. I settled in and few days later I was working fixing computers, working on IT issues, and working my Military job without fail.

They have me working on 3rd shift. Not a great shift to work, but it is a bit easier because the demands for issues sometimes can be less compounding at night. I am learning a lot and am enjoying the experience to be in Tampa. I hope to attend DragonCon for at least 1 to 2 days! That is a high priority. But, I am hoping that I can get time off to be there, especially with all the cast including Brent Spiner and Marc Singer.

As what has been previous alleged through various people, I did meet a native that looked promising, However, I am still in awe as to when she will seek my invitation. However, per request, I have been periodically keeping up and going to look for her good graces.

The area here is really beautiful. I traveled to various places within Florida that have not been hit by the current BP oil spill. Some cities include Miami, St. Petersburg, and various cities around Tampa. It is a beautiful place to be. I hear everybody saying, what are you doing with Fleet down there? Who is acting in our behalf there?

I spoke to both Jack Eaton and Ralph Planthold when I attended Vulcan in Tampa back in May. I believed that Ralph's chapter was the best fit for me. After speaking to Jack and Sunny I was convinced. There are a lot of chapters that are so close that you can pretty much get insight into them just by attending their chapter meeting. Oliver Savander Mark, Sunny, and Ralph for the most part attend each other's monthly meetings. James comes to them also. There were a few discussions going on about a summit hosting. For the most part they all are a great group of people who are knowledgeable and sincerely willing to help anyone to grow. I attended Ralph's meeting on the 19th of June. Sunny took and even did a sign happy birthday to me. It was really cool. I hope to do some events with them soon.

I will write later, and send some pictures soon. I have to get back to the office duties.

PASSAGES

Character actor Michael Pataki died April 15th in North Hollywood, Calif., of cancer. He was 72.

Star Trek fans will recognize Pataki from his roles as Korax in the Original Series episode, "The Trouble with Tribbles" and as Karnas in the Next Generation Episode "Too Short a Season." He was the first to speak the Klingon language in the former.

Pataki was born in Youngstown, Ohio, on January 16, 1938. He studied drama and political science at the University of Southern California. He made his film debut in the late 1950s, and appeared frequently on television, often in villainous roles.

Pataki was a versatile thespian who frequently played the bad guy in pictures like "Grave of the Vampire" and "Airport '77."

Born in Youngstown, Ohio, Pataki attended USC where he double majored in drama and political science. His film debut was an uncredited role in 1958's "Ten North Frederick," but it was at a 1966 summer stock festival in Edinburgh that he impressed. Other films included "The Onion Field," "The Dirt Gang," "The Baby" and "The Bat People."

On TV Pataki recurred on "The Amazing Spider-Man" and guested on series including "The Twilight Zone," "Combat," "Rawhide," Ben Casey, "My Favorite Martian," "Batman," "The Flying Nun," "Mission: Impossible," "Baretta," "Happy Days," "McCloud," "Barney Miller," "Little House on the Prairie," "Charlie's Angels," "T.J. Hooker," "WKRP in Cincinnati," "Laverne and Shirley," "The Jeffersons," "The Fall Guy," "Airwolf" and "St. Elsewhere."

Michael Pataki as Korax in the Original Series episode "The Trouble With Tribbles"

As Karnas in the Next Generation Episode "Too Short a Season."

More recently, Pataki was the voice of George Liquor in the animated "The Ren and Stimpy Show" on Spike network. Pataki directed low-budgeter "Mansion of the Doomed" and soft-core sex farce "Cinderella." He produced the TV version of tuner "Pippin" in 1981 and also worked as an acting coach.

CONVENTIONAL WISDOM

There is going to be a summer comic book show at the Coca-Cola Space Science Center on Sunday 01 August from 11:00 AM-4:00 PM. Admission will be $4.00 but DaVinci personnel can get in for $2.00 which goes into the DaVinci treasury! In addition, anyone paying for a new membership will get a $4.00 off fee, but they have to sign up and pay that day. Dutch has requested that we limit the number of folks manning the DaVinci table to 3 so I will need a couple of volunteers with uniforms that can stay the entire day. Thanks and plan on attending this great event.

Back on the schedule is the fall Sci-Fi show currently planned for 09 October from 10:00 AM-6:00 PM. No word yet on any special guests. Stay tuned!

USS DAVINCI IN PHOTOS

The following is a trip down the USS DaVinci memory lane. Each month I will show a series of photographs from our very beginning, as the Shuttle DaVinci, up until the present time. Many of you will remember these faces. To others they will be complete strangers. But, they made what the USS DaVinci is today. Enjoy! Reminisce. If you have any photographs that you would like to see published in the Pilot, feel free to send them to me with a brief explanation as to who is in the photo and when and where it was taken.
